Personals are solicited. All persons going on a visit or having friends visiting them from abroad are requested to notify us by mail or otherwise

Subscribers will find opposite their names either the date or the number of the paper to which they have paid. When the year only is given, as "81, 82," it means the 1st of March of that year.

Commercial Office, in new block, opposite Post Office, corner Huron and Pearl streets.

MARCHING ON.

Next week the dollar edition of the COMMERCIAL will be enlarged to a twenty-four by thirty-five inch sheet. It is now twenty-two and a half by thirty-four. This is the second enlargement since the beginning of the present volume, March 1st. Our increasing patronage warants the enlargement. To all desiring more reading matter than the local edition affords we will furnish for $1.50 per annum a mammoth seven column quarto which will be the largest paper in Washtenaw county, and the best. This latter will be rich in interesting stories, will give the state news, foreign matters, etc. All parties now taking the dollar edition and wishing to change to the large sized quarto, can do so, if paid up to March 1st '81, by paying $1.50. They will be credited to March 1st, '82, and will receive the quarto from date of payment.

The dollar edition, the largest in the state, will be a good thing, both as to convenience in mailing and in containing the escence and cream of what the former Ypsilantian needs—local matters, city and county, editorials, and other interesting reading.

Now then, friends, for a general campaign. All aid rendered by friends of seventeen years standing—no truer or better—will be thankfully received. Tell your next door neighbor. Every friend, every acquaintance, every neighbor you meet, commend to him the COMMERCIAL. And ladies, you can do us a great deal of good. One kind word from you will go a great ways. Won't you speak it and receive our thanks.

ATTENTION.

We will give clubbing rates for the COMMERCIAL with any publication you want. Home and foreign quarterlies, magazines, the leading papers of the United States and of Michigan. Call for terms.

THE NEW PRINCIPAL AS A PREACHER.

The storm last Sunday morning had a tendency to lessen the congregation, but the fact that the new Principal of the Normal, Dr. MacVicar, was to preach at the Baptist church filled the house. The Doctor is a concise reasoner, and held the audience throughout the discourse. He does not attract so much by his manner of speaking as by what he says. The points of the sermon were well taken and placed in a light tended to carry conviction.

The text was taken from the tenth chapter of Hebrews, thirty-first verse: "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." The meaning of the passage was first given. It did not mean merely that we were to fall into the hands of a Judge that would pass upon us a fearful sentence. Man is finite and cannot act in more than one phase of his character at once; but God is infinite, and will treat each individual at once as a unit, as he stands related to other human beings, and to innocence. God loves each individual. His love of the race, as in finite minds, means justice to all.

The passage means that we accept the consequences of our own free acts. It is not disputed that man is a free moral agent, but his freedom is limited. This is a life of consequences. The farmer is at liberty to choose the kind of grain he will sow, but after the sowing he is powerless to alter the nature of the crop. A man may choose his associates and principles, but, after the choice, he cannot control their effect upon him. To every act in life God has affixed a consequence, and man is free to choose the act, not the result.

Then it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of a living God because he leaves us to the consequences of our own acts. Every act in life is accompanied by a present experience—its immediate effect—but if continued, we acquire an aptitude for a certain motion of the muscles, or methods of thinking or acting. Thus our character is effected for eternity.

At the end of life the sinner will be left to himself and will realize how deceitful is the heart of man. The christian will be sheilded by the blood of Christ from the consequences of his previous sinful life.

The elements entering into this present life will increase the torment of the wicked in the future. As at the death of a mother, a son who has turned his back on her love is filled with remorse, so throughout all eternity the sinner will lament rejecting the proffered love of Christ. All the advantages of this life will but furnish sources of regret in the future for the unrepentant.

An appeal was made to business men and others too busy to think of the future, to remember that though they were free to choose their course of action, by so doing they voluntarily accept the consequences, and it is a fearful thing for the unrepentant to fall into the hands of a living God.

Donavin's Original Teneeseeans at the opera house, Nov. 29th.

Rev. Mr. Scott resumes his pastorate Dec. 5th.

Judicious advertising is the key stone of success.

There are a few cases of diphtheria in the city. Lookout for undue exposure.

Thanksgiving day is past, now for the Hollidays.

The people of Augusta are already appreciating the Butler road. The boys get some novel rides.

The chickens did not roost so high, but that families minus turkies fared sumptuously.

Don't forget to attend the auction of G. W. W. Foster on his premises half a mile south of West Sumpter postoffice one week from to-day. Saturday Dec. 4th.

Those who fail to attend the entertainment given by the Tenneseeans the 29th, will miss one of the finest musical treats of the season.

C. L. Yost is down among the Huronites and he is mightily pleasad. C. L. is a social body and he likes to be among the crowd. He says his sales have increased. Well eastward the star of empire takes its way.

Wm. E. Pattison, eldest son of Rev. Wm. P. Pattison, pastor of the Baptist church in this city from 1854 to 1861, has been elected county clerk of Mongtomery County, Iowa. His father is in bad health and will spend the winter at Alton, Ill.

Donavin's Orsginal Tenneseeans who appear at the opera house Nov. 29th comprise the most gifted colored vocalists in the country. They have unusually fine voices and their program is of the most pleasing and popular chaeracter. We are safe in saying that no entertrinment of the season will give greater satisfaction.

Regular services at all the churches tomorrow. The pastors are unable to give us the subjects of their sermons. The M. E. church will hold iis first quarterly meeting. Love Feast at 9 A. M., in lecture room. A sacramental service will follow in the audience room conducted by the pastor. Preaching in the evening by the Presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Washburn.

What everybody says must be true. If that is so, Zell's Encyclopedia must be a very desirable work to possess. We have taken some pains to inform ourselves on this subject and we learn that those who have had it longest like it best. All uniformally unite in saying they could not do without it and would not part with it for many times its cost

The Omaha Bee contains more far western news than any other paper on our exchange list. The effort of the publishers to draw immigration to that fertile region by circulating their Weekly among eastern farmers is commendable. The Bee is mailed free to any applicant who forwards his address to The Daily Bee Omaha, Neb.

On account of Thankgiving day intervening rendering it impossible to set up all the speeches made on the occasion of farewell to Dr. MacVicar at Potsdam Normal school, we defer until next week. Every Normal students as well as others will want to read these speeches. They will appear in our seven colomn quarto for sale at the News office and also in the dollar weekly.

Be sure and hear the Tennesseeans next Monday night. To those of our readers who would witness a most pleasing and unique entertainment, we would recommend the one to be given by the Tennesseeans next Monday evening. Possessing marvelously sweet and well trained voices, their singing captivates all hearers and the troupe as a whole is one of the best that has ever visited the city.

Mrs. Deborah Kellogg, mother of Mrs. L. D. White, and L. B. Kellogg, of Ann Arbor died at the residence of her daughter, on Main street, November 17th in her 80th year. She was a native of Massachusetts, and with her husband was one of the pioneers of Washtenaw county, settling in the the township of Pittsfield in 1831. As a mother she was the idol of her family. It can be said of her "she had no enemies." The mother of 14 children she survived them all but two.

We are surprised to ascertain that there is such a large subscription in this city for Zell's Encyclopedia. Nearly every hour in the day some one says: "I am taking the best encyclopedia in the world. I can find everything in it. I find it to be ahead of anything I have ever examined. Besides I can get it by paying only fifty cents at a time or just as much more as I please." Now is the only chance you will ever have to get it in this way, while the agent is here.

NORMAL ITEMS.

Where did you spend Thanksgiving? Prof. McLouth and wife spent the holiday near Toledo.

Mr. Chas. Woodworth of the Normal is giving lessons in short hand to several of the students, and intends to give lessons here during next summer vacation.

A short time ago the Sentinel wanted to know whether any one knew what the Normal motto: "Palma non sine labore." meant, and advised people to think before they spoke. Therefore a committee of five students appointed themselves from purely charitable motives to furnish to that paper the information called for. With considerable labor the committee can furnish the following literal translation: "Palma," the Presidential chair; "non," is not to be obtained by the Democratic party; "Seine," without; "labore," meriting it. It is hoped our labors will be appreciated.

GOOD CHEER TO COMMERCIAL FRIENDS.

We are now employing eight hands, just double the number of six months ago. Our removal is justified by increased patronage. Plenty to do, but always room for one more in the carriage. Bring on your printing. Don't put off Holliday printing to the last minute and then want it eleven o'clock the day before.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

At the Presbyterian church Rev. Mr. Bourns gave a practical sermon. His remarks were exceedingly appropriate to the day. He called this, in the highest sense, a God-fearing nation. We ought to be thankful that the President and Governors of the different states had appointed a day o thanksgiving, and the general sentiment of the people upheld them. Some thought it proper on such occasions to speak concerning spiritual things only, but he believed in thanking God for temporal blessings. People are so used to receiving the necessities of life that they are apt to take the credit to themselves; and the resources of this country are so boundless that we laugh at the idea of a famine; but still it is all in the hands of God. This point was plainly illustrated by means of the Chicago fire, how by continued rains, or by draught, or, after the crops are gathered into the barns, by the lightning of Heaven, destruction might overtake even this land of vast resources. The general prosperity of the country was referred to. Its increase of exports, financial condition, etc., Michigan furnishing its quota of wheat, lumber, iron, copper and salt.

The prosperous condition of the schools and churches was mentioned and a beautiful comparison drawn between them. The church spire and dome of the college both pointed upward, but as the spire reached the higher, so were its teachings of more importance.

The people were waking up on the questions of temperance and Mormanism. The day was sure to come when intemperance should be abolished, and within the next decade the latter day saints would either be translated or transported.

The whole business world had resumed. The christian church must follow its example and resume its former zeal in the work of reclaiming souls. And they must not be afraid to carry their religion into politics. They had become degenerated because christian men had left their religion at home when going to the polls. This is indeed a grand country. What makes it so is its regard for the Bible. It is recognized and honored on the land and sea because it recognizes and honors the Bible at home. It behooved every true citizen to take an active interest in shaping the policies of the nation so as to renown to the honor of God, for surely he never has favored any country as he has this.

The singing formed an attractive feature of the services. Collection for the Home Association, $53,66.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

At St. Lukes, Rev Mr. Wilson preached from Psalms, 100: 4.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him and bless his name."

Gratitude does not and cannot benefit God. But it reacts upon the person exercising it with great and manifold power. The child who returns ingratitude for parental kindness is a monster. Behind a grateful soul is the man—genuine manhood. A national thanksgiving is of incalculable worth to a people. It would be a glorious sight and one that ought to be witnessed: every business man leaving his counter, the lawyer his brief, the mechanic and laboring men their shops and tools, the farmer his home, and crowding into temples of praise and thanksgiving. It would seem that there is a gradual falling off from the attendance in the sanctuaries on this annual day of thanks to the Divine giver. When a worldly spirit and love of gain, when, as the foreigner says of the Yankee, "He knows nothing but money-making," shall become a fixed fact, there will be no thanksgiving days, and then, woe betide the land.

What shall be thought of the man who claims to be a christian, staying away from the "courts of praise" on this day? What of his influence upon family, friends, neighbors and help? God will judge that man.

In the judgment of Dr. Wilson this nation is God's last test of human progress in the way of right doing. Upon this continent is being worked out for the last time the problems of human destiny. The teeming millions from east and west meet here, and when a dense population shall have covered every inch of our soil, whither shall the currents of population turn? Here is to be the final conflict between right and wrong. Fought out, the consumation day has come and the earth is ready for the second coming. The earthquakes of time are past. The civilization of America has followed in the footsteps of the wrecks of prior civilizations, gone down or grandly stood the test and soars aloft, proving itself to be the noblest ever bestowed upon lost man.

Collection for Home Association, $25.50.

It is realy a nice place for a fish market that our old friend S. M Vought has, cornering the main business streets. It was a happy thought utilizing this waste place square in the center of business.

York and Jarvis have a neat barber shop corner of Huron and Congress streets. The boys mean business and are getting it.

The report of the Ladie's Home Association shows sixty-nine families aided and $269.65 expended in wood, clothing and provisions.

We notice from the Chicago Times that Mrs. Mary A. Gilbert has been awarded $17,000 by the courts on account of the death of her husband Milton Gilbert at Jackson a few months since. Our young former fellow citizen Mr. Alfred Lucking was one of the counsel for the plantiff vs such eminent lights of law as G. V. N. Lothrop and Ashley Pond.

Thursday the saloons all over the city were open. In front of Fulton's saloon there was a big time in the evening—a shooting affray, though it is claimed that the shooting was in the air; and for fun, Johny Campbell got badly pounded up, being set upon by several colored boys. The Mayor went down and shut up the chebang. There are young men and boys in those saloons traveling fast the road to the penitentiary.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Owen did some trading in Detroit last Tuesday. Freedman Bros. were the gainers.

Mr. C. C. Chapman of Chicago, one of the publishers of "The History of Washtenaw County" was in the city Tuesday. He gave us a call, we like the plan of the work.

Mr. Harry Opie from Detroit is foreman of this office, a pleasant, genial man. He will be happy to form the acquaintance of our business men wanting good printing. He moves his family next week.

Mr. Willie Whitman, a member of the University and brother of the prosecuting attorney elect is putting in some work in this office on a law record for the Michigan Central of about 250 pages.

Hon. Casper E. Yost, wife and daughter spent Thanksgiving at their old home, at Mr. J. S. Jeness. Mrs. Yost has been for the ast six months at Clifton Springs, State of New York, on account of ill health, she has very much improved. They left for their home at Omaha Friday Morning.

Mrs. Morrison from Grand Rapids spent her ninetieth birth day at the home of her daughter Mrs. Asher, in Pittsfield, Nov. 15th, and met large number of relatives and friends. Four generations were represented. One of the chief features of the day was that Mrs. Morrison spun thirteen knots of woolen yarn and on the following day increased the number to thirty. She is as hale and hearty as a person of fifty.

Good Templars social to-night. Good music, and a good time generally.

Band of Hope Wednesday afternoon.

Citizens' temperance prayer meeting in W. C. T. U. hall, Tuesday evening.

The Union Cornet Band boys returned Thursday from their tour of the South. They look as if they had fared well. They were welcomed by a grand social party in the evening.

The Ballad Dime Concert Tuesday evening, though not a success pecuniarily, was decidedly so in other respects. The programme was a rich one in music, song and speaking.

The article beginning "An Earnest Discussion," etc., was proved, but accidentally not corrected, and went through a part of the edition before it was discovered.

Letters remaining in post office November 26: Kate Brundage, Fannie Chase, F. M. Curtis, Pat. Donelty, Edward Fish, W. Hammond, Mrs. A. E. Mills, Prof. Chas. Philley, Anthony Ryan, Mrs. Lucy Ward, N. S. Wheeler: Geo. Whire.

Justice Skinner has sold out his court room furniture, and has suffered a few days past beyond language to express from delirium tremens. The terrible description given in the Free Press of a traveling man's dire woes from this cause have been experienced by our unfortunate friend. The sorrows of a darker and deeper damnation ought to rest upon those who furnish him the liquor.

We were surprised to see the small attendance at the Young People's Meeting at the Presbyterian Church Monday evening. Miss Coates handsomely read "The Brave Days of Old," by Macaulay. Prof. Bellows read an essay—"Science and Religion." Is there a conflict? It showed much study, research and advanced novel views. Bro. Richmond was pretty sharp, and yet quite complementary in his criticisms. We have the essay, and shall take hold of it next week.

EDITORIAL NOTES,

Judging from the vote at the last election (1,300 ballots), we have a population ranging above 5,000.

Mr. Albert Crane ran 176 votes ahead of the electoral ticket in this county. He wants to escape the 329.

It seems that Gen. Garfield was not in Washington at the time the Morey letter was dated.

The Saline Observer is a new paper started in that enterprising town by LeBaron & Nissley. It is a neat-looking sheet, and we wish them success.

We bespeak the attention of our business men, especially holiday advertisors, to our increased facilities for job work and advertising. All ads. will go into both editions.

The fire at Adrian College, consuming one of the buildings, shows the importance of several buildings instead of one grand one. Forty-six students were turned out of their dormitories, but they could double up and so be provided for in other buildings.

There was an earnest discussion last sunday at the temperance meeting over a resolution offerad by Dr. Hall to secure the best talent possible from abroad, has afternoon and special meetings. The point of the discussion not whether the work should be conducted in regard to prohibition and the constitutional amendment, or be simply a revival of temperance, independant of outside issnes. The discussion was adjourned to the club meeting Friday evening.

The remark having been frequently made to us that J. Webster Childs used his influence to defeat Capt. Allen, we are glad to know and be able to state that there is not a shadow of truth in the charge. On the contrary, Mr. Childs rose from a sick bed and did what he could to secure his success. A snap game was played upon the citizens of Augusta while Mr. Childs was sick; or, to use a Scripture illustration, while he was sick "his enemy came and sowed tares." Let them glory in their shame, but a day of retribution is coming.

There is a heavy boom for Omar D. Conger for Senator. If Conger wins, there will be no mourning hereabouts. We have great admiration for the man—and he is a man, every inch of him. His admirable lead at the Chicago Convention, resulting no doubt in the nomination and election of General Garfield, marks him as no ordinary politician—honest, straightforward, bold, stalwart, of the Zach. Chandler stripe. It seems a pity to remove him from the House, where he has won so many laurels and is the actual leader. The Southern brigadiers would send up their Ebenezer if Conger should be removed from the House. But there would be wailing in the Senate.

The dominant sentiment of the Republican press of the State seems to be that Senator Baldwin should be his own successor Can we do better? It is not a question of reward, or even of past meritorious services in other positions. The people of Michigan and the whole country are to be served, and the simple question for consideration is, who of the several candidates can serve the State and nation most efficiently? Baldwin is not an orator or a politician, but he is a man of eminent good sense, judicious in all his acts; a first-class business man. Send the orator and the politician into that great debating society, the lordly House of Congress; the business revisor, the calm, judicious talent, to the Senate.

THE WINTER OF 1842-3.

The winter of 1842-3 we well remember. The Miller excitement was at its height—the world's end was at hand. The comet switched its huge tail in mid-heavens every night, the apparent harbinger of impending woes. It contributed much to add to the pith and power of the Millerite preachers. We were teaching school (then 18 years of age) in the town of Perry, Shiawassee Co A backwoods evangelist by the name of Barnes, quite eloquent, with a wonderful gift of gab, held evening meetings in the log school house. The farm inhabitants from far and near gathered in and were electrified. One evening, as he painted the scenes of awful destruction that were to characterize the dissolution of the earth, the crash of worlds, and pointed out the comet as God's messenger of wrath upon a guilty world, the house was in an uproar of excitement. A wail went up for mercy. We appeared to be about the only one unmoved, believing that that beautiful, new, undeveloped country had a big future before it. But what strengthened the belief of many was the intensely cold winter. Cold and snow set in about the same time (early in November) as this year, and was unremitting until after the spring election—the first Monday in April. There was an unusual depth of snow. The feed for stook was so short that a sudden end of the world would have been a mercy. Cattle were kept alive by browsing the tops of trees cut down on purpose.

That winter we heard Rev. Mr. Blades, then a young man just beginning to preach, in another log school house on the Grand River road, from the text, "The Queen of Sheba came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom and glory of Solomon, and behold, a greater than Solomon is here." Tall and straight as an arrow, a commanding presence and good voice, he impressed the pioneers of that day as almost a second Whitefield.

A GREAT AND TRUE MAN HAS FALLEN.

The citizens of this city were startled by the announcement in Wednesday's Evening News that Prof. James Craig Watson was dead. He died at Madison, Wisconsin, Tuesday morning, of disease of the bladder. His remains were brought to Ann Arbor for interment. He was born in Middlesex, Canada West, and was 42 years old. He graduated from the University in 1857. In 1859 he became professor of astronomy in the University, and retained the position of director of the Observatory until last year, when he accepted a similar one at the University of Wisconsin. No man brought more fame or honor to the University than he has during a period of fifteen years. He began at the early age of 25 those remarkable discoveries that have made his name and the University of Michigan famous in all lands. He headed the list of star-searchers, discovering over 23. The following anecdote is related of him by the Post and Tribune:

He was an enthusiast in his profession, and a queer story is related of him on making his first discovery of an asteroid. It was after midnight, and he ran down stairs, knocking over chairs and furniture in his eagerness to call his wife to come and look at the newly-found member of the planetary system. He had long felt great confidence in the existence of an intra-Mercurial planet, and this was justified by his discovery of Vulcan in 1878. He has also long believed that there exists a planet beyond the orbit of Neptune, and the height of his ambition was to find this far-off stranger, which he had great confidence was one of the solar system. It was this belief more than anything else which led him to resign his position at Ann Arbor, in which he had acquired his fame, and accept the professorship at Madison, where the new Washburne observatory afforded him facilities which the University of Michigan did not.

THE NORTH AND THE SOUTH.

From Harper's Weekly.

There is much speculation since the election about the "solid South." Mr. Dorsey, the secretary of the Republican committee, says that the popular majority for General Garfield in the Northern States would be 520,000, while General Hancock's in the same States would hardly reach 1,800. In view of this astonishing difference, and of the suppression of the Republican vote in many parts of the Southern States, there is no doubt whatever of the enormous popular as well as electoral majority of Garfield in the Northern States. What effect will this have upon the "solid South"? The result shows one thing clearly, and that is the decision of the North, by which we do not mean a section so much as an idea, to hold together so long as "the South" solidly confronts it. That is merely to say that the theories of the Union and Constitution which are known as Southern, the social and industrial traditions of that part of the country, and its general spirit and condition to-day, are not such as to show that an administration controlled by "the South" would be more beneficial than a "Northern" administration. While, therefore, "the South" remains solid, it forces this question of sectionalism upon the country, and if the question is to be which section shall govern, the answer is very sure to be that which has now been recorded.

Intelligent people in the Southern States ought to see that the assumption of greater desire of sectional good feeling upon the part of Democrats than upon that of the Republicans is ridiculous. Here, for instance, in the State of New York, the aggregate Hancock majorities are 61,744, and the aggregate Garfield majorities 83,757. But to these Hancock totals the City of New York contributes more than 41,000, and the city of Brooklyn more than 9,000. That is to say, more than 50,000 of the Democratic 61,744 come from these two cities. These figures represent the least intelligent voters of these two cities. Now does any sensible Southern man really suppose that the slums and grog-shops and foreign elements of New York and Brooklyn are more friendly to an honest mutual good understanding between the sections than the vast majorities of intelligent and substantial American citizens throughout the State of New York? We are constantly told that if we lived in any Southern State we should be Democrats. Granting this, for the argument. It then follows that the intelligence of "the South" is Democratic, and that of "the North" is Republican. Why should they not pull together? How is it the interest of business men in Charleston, Savannah, New Orleans, and Mobile, or of any well-disposed citizens in any Southern State, to be politically allied with the worst elements of great cities in the Northern States? Indeed, take the extremest illustrations: what natural or reasonable ground of political alliance is there between Wade Hampton and John Kelly? There is none whatever except the desire of Hampton and his friends to seize control of the Government. They wish the votes of the Northern slums now, as the old slave-holding lords wished them formerly, to secure power. It is an alliance of contempt on one side, and of venality upon the other. But it has constantly failed for twenty years, and it will continue to fail; and fortunately there are some signs that intelligent men in the Southern States are tired of so barren a league.

The Charleston News and Courier is a Democratic paper of good standing in South Carolina. Commenting upon the election, it says:

"The South has been kept solid by the conviction that in no other way could the inalienable rights guaranteed by the Constitution be effectively maintained. We answer for it that if the Southern States can be relieved of this feeling (as they would have been had Hancock been elected) the Southern people will turn their thoughts and attention to practical business affairs, and will be ruled in politics by the considerations which control voters in States where the negro is an abstraction and the carpet-bagger is an unknown quantity. That will be the end of the solid South. The lines may run from North to South hereafter. Better still, each community will seek its own advantage, hoping at the same time that the aggregation of local advantages will comport with the good fortune, happiness and freedom of the whole people."

To this there are two things to be said: one is that no administration could respect more scrupulously all rights guaranteed by the Constitution than the present Republican administration, and the other is that the rights guaranteed by the Constitution are and have been deliberately and systematically outraged by the party of the News and Courier, and with the approval of that paper. In Columbia, South Carolina, according to the correspondence of the New York Times, ballot-boxes were stuffed by Democrats, Republican ballots were drawn from other boxes and burned, and armed Democrats bull-dozed Republican voters. At Darlington, in the same State, upon the same authority, the Red Shirts took possession of the town, prevented the access of Republicans to the polls, threatened them with revolvers, and drove away a thousand Republicans. The News and Courier would do well to reflect that it is this Southern Democratic overthrow of rights guaranteed by the Constitution that has given General Garfield an aggregate popular majority in the Northern States of 520,000 to General Hancock's 1,800. It is the conviction of intelligent and patriotic citizens of the Northern States, that one of the objects of the alliance between Wade Hampton and the Northern slums is to protect and facilitate such crimes that have produced the result of the election. If "the South" proposes to remain solid until "the North" acquiesces in the overthrow of the civil and political rights of those whom it freed, "the South," will remain solid for a long time. But now that this is fully understood, now that it is evident to every man of sense in the Southern States that the Republican party has no disposition whatever to harm any Constitutional right of any person or of any State, the new administration may justly expect the open and frank support of those at the South who desire a cordial good understanding among all sections of the country

Gen. Garfield's vote in Michigan is 18,300 greater than Hayes' vote in 1876.

The Democrats carried only 9 out of 76 counties in Michigan at the late election.

The Board of State Canvassers includes Secretary of State Jenney, State Treasurer Pritchard, and Land Commissioner Neasmith.

The following from the Port Huron Times expresses a feeling which is generally prevalent throughout the State: "Amid the general rejoicing over their overwhelming victory, Republicans in every part of Michigan will feel deep regret at the defeat of Capt. E. P. Allen, candidate for re-election to the Legislature in Washtenaw Co., which was due to the opposition of the liquor dealers. Capt. Allen is one of the ablest and most popular of the young Republicans of Michigan."

Since the adoption of the Constitution 19 different persons have been Vice Presidents of the United States. Of these New York furnished six, Massachusetts 3, Virginia 2, Kentucky 2, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Tennessee, Maine and Indiana each one. General Arthur will be the twentieth Vice President and the seventh taken from New York. And he is the first gentleman elected to that responsible position who has never previously been a member of any legislative body.

From "Kaleph's" New York letter to the "Christian Standard," of Milwaukee:

"It was only last week that I happened to see the fac-similes of Millet's remarkable style of painting, in last month's Scribner, although I had looked at them a number of times with but qualified satisfaction, I think Mr. Roswell Smith should have done to his 125,000 subscribers what he did to me on happening into his sanctum the other day. That is, he held up the prints in the magazine against the wall eight feet from my eyes, where they should hang, instead of being held in the hand, if they are to be seen. If he had so advised all his readers, there would have been few to miss the breadth and power of those effects, which, if held close to the eye, are worse than lost. It should also be understood, in appreciating the new style of wood-engraving introduced by Scribner's, that the motive is genuiness, or the representation of things as they actually appear at such a distance as would reduce them to the dimensions in the print. This motive, therefore, excludes the clear-cut definition and detail that please the eye rather than the instructed imagination or sense of reality. Unless the work is confined to a very small subject, the only effects that can be truthfully sought are of the broadest and simplest character, leaving the minutiæ it the indistinctness of distance. Explanation seems to be very generally needed of the meaning and purpose of the numerous series of specimens, from famous and other artists, to which the lavish expenditure of Scribner's Art Department has been directed, with so much more success amongst connoiseurs than with the general reader. Such critics (including the artists themselves) give the meed of astonishment, higher than praise, to achievements in wood-engraving that have imparted to the millions in the country at large, almost for nothing, repersentations of the state of art such as have heretofore been entirely wanting, or accessible only to the few. Sometimes these representations are more valuable for information than pleasure, but their general success is, according to the best judges, something unprecedented in Europe or America."

From a Prominent Physician.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: Reading your advertisement in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from spavin eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse, and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars. Respectfully yours,

H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE
ON HUMAN FLESH.

Bakersfield, Vt., Dec. 23, 1879.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: I wish to add my testimony in favor of your invaluable liniment, "Kendall's Spavin Cure." In the spring of 1862 I slipped on the ice and sprained my right limb at the knee joint. I was very lame and at times suffered the most excruciating pain. I wore a bandage on it for over a year, and tried most everything in my reach, but could find nothing that would give me permanent relief. When I overworked, it would pain me very much. In April, 1878, I began to think I should be a cripple for life: but having some of "Kendall's Spavin Cure" thought I would try it. I used one-third of a bottle and experienced relief at once. The pain left me and has not troubled me since. I feel very grateful to you and would recommend "Kendall's Spavin Cure" to all who suffer with sprains or rheumatism. Yours truly, MRS. J. BOUTELL.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

Is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, and yet it is penetrating, and powerful to reach every deep seated pain, or to remove any bony growth or any other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, ailous, sprains, swellings and any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success, to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

COUNTY, STATE, AND GENERAL NEWS.

From the Courier.

The Pork market opens at $5.00 per hundred. Pretty good figures to start with.

Business on the line of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & G. T. R. R. is said to be booming. That's good news.

Judge Harriman has re-commited Andrew Shuda of Ypsilanti to the insane asylum at Pontiac. He was discharged some little time ago, supposed to have been cured.

A freight train was off the track down at the M. C. R. R. depot last Monday. It is stated that a wrecked engine and thirteen car loads of debris were taken away from the smash-up at Marshall and Mattewan last week.

We notice that several of our exchanges are "wading into" the young men who crowd around the church doors at the close of service, ready to grab their girl as she passes out. It is our opinion that the girl who will allow a young man to accompany her home from church is foolish. If the said young man will not come and go to church with you, just let him go to grass.

R. E. Frazer and Prof. Wilson were greeted with a densely packed audience at the reform club rooms Sunday afternoon, while a number were informed that there was "no more room," and were obliged to retrace their steps. The meeting was of extraordinary interest. The fire that for a short time has seemed to be slumbering broke out afresh; a large number of signatures were attached to the pledge and both the speakers' words and the general feeling of the members of the club, point to a strong and vigorous campaign during the winter months at least.

"To what extent do the Strictures of Mr. Charles Francis Adams, in Harpers' Monthly for November, apply to School Superintendents in Michigan?" a discussion opened by Prof. W. H. Payne, Ann Arbor.

AFTERNOON.

"The University Diploma System," Sup't H. N. French, Kalamazoo. "A Study in Natural Science." Prof. A. J. Cook, Agricultural College, Lansing. "School Board; their Responsibiliiies to the People, and their Duties to the Schools," Judge Thomas M. Cooley.

The program, as outlined above, gives promise of a most interesting and profitable meeting. The opening lecture by Dr. MacVicar, the new president of the Normal School, will, from his high reputation, be a fine effort.

"Text Books vs. Better Means in the School Room," will bring out some of the most radical thinkers in the State, and old fogy ideas will be thoroughly dusted before the discussion is over.

"Methods in History" will give practical hints to every teacher of that interesting study.

Prof. W. N, Hailman is an author and teacher of note, and will give a profitable talk on common errors in primary work.

Mr. Adams' severe article in the November Harper's Monthly will form the basis of a searching discussion of school superintendence in Michigan.

Sup't French's paper will deal resolutely with the University methods of exominaiion and admission, a very important subject.

Chief Justice Cooley will discuss perhaps the most important topic of all, and one that lies at the very foundation of all educational progress in the State. His views on such a subject will attract wide attention

Every wide awake, progressive teacher in the State should be at Lansing to listen to, if not to take part in, the discussion of these important topics. The railroads offer reduced rates, and the hotels in Lansing make a liberal discount from usual charges; under these circumstances Michigan teachers should come out in force.

Teachers wishing to secure reduced railroad fare should communicate at once with Sup't. C. B. Thomas, of Saginaw, who is President of the Association, giving in full the names of the roads on which they will travel to and from Lansing.

THE STATE RETURNS.

Royale. The total stands as follows: For president, Garfield 184,518, Hancock 130,830, Weaver 34.867, Dow 938. Garfield's plurality is 54,688, and his majority over all 17,883. For governor, Jerome 177.973, Holloway 136,939, Woodman 35,221, McKeever 926. Jerome's plurality is 41.034, and his majority over all 4,887. The whiskey vote and all others torn away from the republican party on governor appears to have been 6,545. This is the poorest return for a corrupt investment that was ever made in politics in Michigan, considering that the "farmer" cry in behalf of Mr. Hollaway may have changed some republican votes also.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November, 1880.

MR. EDITOR:—

Unusual interest is already manifested in the coming inauguration. The event will be the occasion of the most lavish expenditure. The people of the whole country seem to have caught the inspiration, and applications for rooms and board in immense numbers are coming from all sections, from individuals, military organizations and excursions. Special rates are expected on all railroads leading to the Capital. Not less than 100,000 visitors will be called here to witness the magnificent pageant. Those who propose to be present should lose no time in securing quarters.

The Bureau of Statistics reports a most marvelous increase in our agricultural interests, showing a growth of cereal products from 615,000,000 bushels in 1840 to 802,000,000 in 1850, 1,238,000,000 in 1860, 1,387,000,000 in 1870, 2,178,000,000 in 1877 and 2,431,000,000 in 1879. The annual product increased from $3,961,000,009 in 1850 to $7,977,000.000 in 1860 and $11,000,000,000 in 1870, yielding exclusiae of labor and wages, a net amount of $2,170,000,000, being nearly twenty per cent. on the total. There are still 400,000,000 acres of land available north of the Ohio river which can produce in wheat or other cereals at least 4,800,000,000 bushels annually to meet the demands of our rapidly increasing population. It is such information as this that inspires the people of the old world to seek homes in this republic now just in its infancy. Nothing but a Chinese wall around the monarchies of Europe can stop this ceaseless tide. More than 14,000 emigrants sailed for America from one single English port in October.

The United States Fish Commission, under the direction of Prof. Baird, are now distributing the carp hatched here this season in the carp ponds to individuals and fish commissions of the different States. Two attempts were made in 1870 to bring a few of these fish to this country from Germany, both of which failed. In the spring of 1877 130 carp were landed for breeding purposes, and from these have sprung all the fish of this kind now in this country, and it will not be long before they will be grown in every State in the Union for fish food. Dr. Hessel, the veteran superintendent of the carp ponds, saw in Luxemburg a carp 300 years old, so old that the moss grew on its back, yet as active as those a year old. These fish grow to weigh 30 pounds and upwards. Only 40 carp were put in Government ponds here at the Capital, and the product is over 100,000, which are now about six inches long. The fish are distributed in tin cases by four traveling agents, each can containing 100 fish. The railroads make no charge for freight, the agent simply paying fare. The applicants are required to be at the nearest station, with suitable vessels to remove the fish to pools prepared for them. Two more large ponds, covering thirteen acres, are now being prepared in the Monument lot, to give increased hatching grounds. The demand is constantly increasing for this species of fish food. Shipments have been made already to New York, Pennsylaania, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Connecticut, Tennessee, Georgia and Texas. These young carp were about six inches long, and Prof. Baird has information that at recent State agricultural fairs where they were exhibited they weighed from one to three and a half pounds each. During fifty days last year one agent traveled 16,000 miles and delivered 7,000 carp, mostly in lots of 16, taking receipts, which are always required, giving name and locality, of which a record is kept, in order that correspondence may be held when desirable to learn as to the success or otherwise of the trial. Nearly all the States have commissions, and a general interest has been awakened in this industry over the country since Prof. Baird has inaugurated his system.

Candidates for speaker and clerk of the next House are coming to the front in sufficient numbers to satisfy the most fastidious. Pennsylvania has three aspirants for the speakership and two for clerk, and it is said not to be much of a year for candidates, either.

The Cabinet and heads of Bureaus are now engaged in preparing their reports for submission to Congress to be in session in a few days. Many members are already here arranging their winter quarters. The old system of leaving the family at home while pater familais was having a jolly time at the Capital has fortunately passed away, and the families of large numbers of members form a part of our cultured winter population.

The pastors of our city churches have opened a formidable crusade against the district commissioners who have in the past been very lax in the matter of granting liquor licenses They are seconded and sustained in this movement by all the law-and-order loving citizens. It is high time that a halt was called and that this city should be freed from this iniquitous traffic. It was here that the dark curse of slavery received its first staggering blow, by a pro vision that involuntary servitude should henceforth be no more in this district. From that hour until Lincoln's proclamation it became a city of refuge for the slaves of all the surrounding country. Let Congress, following the example of the noble State of Kansas, provide that liquor shall never be manufactured or sold in the District, and then there will be a smile on the stolid face of the figure of Justice on the dome of the Capitol. Then will this beautiful city be an asylum for the tempted, a safe habitation for innocence and youth, like unto "The city of the Lord. The Zion of the Holy One of Israel." God speed such a day and the people say Amen.

PARKS.

The condition of Ireland is fearful. It would seem as if a crisis was at hand that would put the power of the British Empire to retain Ireland, as an integral portion, to a test. The landed or tenant system, a legacy of feudal times, is unnatural and wicked. Whether Ireland's woes grow out of England's oppressions, or from priestcraft, we are not fully able to determine; but we imagine from a liberal sprinkling of both. The land owner is finding "Jordan a hard road to travel." Judging from the following, whichever way he turns it is hell, and that Ireland is in a state of siege:

The day following the notice of eviction served on a tenant by Captain Boycott, the agent of Lord Erne, the farm servants were ordered to leave the Captain's employment. Laborers, workmen, herdsmen, stablemen, all departed, leaving the corn standing, the horees in the stable, the sheep in the fieid, the turnips, carrots and potatoes in the ground. The laundress refuses to wash for them; the baker dares not sell them bread, the butcher furnish them with meat. The captain and his wife, escorted by a guard, have to do their best at herding the sheep. His daughters reap and bind the corn. He cannot sell the stock or crops; and there is $2,000 worth of them in the ground which he cannot gather. No human being will buy of him. No human being, except an old domestic, serves him The potatoes must rot, the cattle go astray, his spades lie idle, his linen remain unwashed. His wife, after harnessing the horse herself, must drive to a distant town to procure the necessaries of life; and, were it not for his consort, the agent's life would be in peril. He is advised to leave; but, unfortunately, his own fortune, as well as that of his lord and landlord, is invested in the place, and he cannot sacrifice his occupation and his property. The purpose is to hunt him out and strike terror into others. This method is becoming popular in the country. These combinations are forming everywhere, and at a moment's notice. Not long since, several persons in the interest of the land owners, desiring to attend a "land meeting," found, to their dismay, that not a horse or a vehicle could be hired for the purpose.

Early in the present year a committee, known os the Historical Committee, was appointed by the Pioneer Society to confer with publishers in reference to having the History of this county published. This they diligently did, but not until September was any permanent arrangements made to that effect. At that time, after carefully and critically examining county histories compiled and published by Chas. C. Chapman & Co., of Chicago, they guve to them their endorsement, and made the following agreement with them: Since Messrs. Chapman & Co. have been diligently at work collecting material for the work,—

Ann Arbor, Sept. 30, 1880.

We, the undersigned Historical Committee of the Pioneer Society of Washtenaw County, having examined the plan of historical publications adopted by Chas. C. Chapman & Co., of Chicago, Ill., hereby give our official of the same, and recommend them to the pioneers and residents of this county as worthy of their confidence and patronage as compilers and publishers of its History.

We do also, as instructed by a resolution of said Society, give them access to the records and archives of the Society, in the hands of and under the supervision of its secretary.

Thomas Holmes,
Horace Carpenter, Committee.

In Blackwood's Magazine for November, just published by The Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 41 Barclay Street, N. Y., one of the principal articles is a contribution by W. W. Story, "A Jewish Rabbi in Rome," which calls to mind the poem "A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem," from the same pen, that attracted much attention several years ago. It is a striking picture of the corruptions in the Church in the 15th century, under Sixtus IV.

"Reminiscences of an Old Fogey" is an agreeable narrative of voyages to and from India in former days, in steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Co.'s line, with a glimpse of Indian life, of the experiences of cadets fresh from school, and of girls who in the bloom of youth went out to seek their fortunes.

The other articles are "Army Reform," in which complaint is made of the non-action of the War Office; "The Close of the Afghan Campaign;" and "The Unloaded Revolver," which is another name for the Turkish question, and is filled with gloomy forebodings.

The periodicals reprinted by The Leonard Scott Publishing Co. (41 Barclay Street, N. Y.) are as follows: The Lonpon Quarterly, Edinburgh, Westminster, and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price, $4 a year for afly one, or only $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the Publishers.

HAPPILY DISAPPOINTED.

Disappointments are frequently grevious to bear, but having received letters almost daily from parties who have been happily disappointed we relate their experience which will be profitable for every one to remember. Thousands have written to the proprietors of Kendall's Spavin Cure, stating that they began using it without any faith that it would cure spavins, but had been happily disappointed as it had completely cured the spavin and removed the bunch without blistering, and after using it for various purposes, all state freely that they find it the very best liniment ever used for any lameness on beast or man. Please read the advertisement for Kendall's Spavin Cure.

LIFE IN THE LONE LAND.

BY EDWARD S. ELLIS.

CHAPTER III.

UNPLEASANT COMPANY.

The prospect before the lads was dismal enough.

The wind had risen until it was blowing a gale, and the waves dashed against the sides of the iceberg with a violence that caused no little anxiety for the men who had taken to the boats from the burning ship. The sky continued murky and over cast, shutting out moon and stars, so that the cousins could nowhere catch a glimpse of the heaving ocean around them.

The mountainous mass of ice upon which they were standing was in motion; but who should tell its destination?

Would it sweep to the northward, through Hudson Strait into Baffin Bay, and then into the polar oceans of the far North? or would it turn to the southward, and, forging its way against the Gulf Stream, gradually dissolve as it approached the low latitudes?

The ultimate destination or fate of the prodigious mass was of no importance to the two boys floating upon it, inasmuch as their own case much be decided long before that was reached.

As a matter of course, they had not brought a particle of food along, and there was not more than a dozen charges of ammunition between them. They were without an extra coat or blanket, and ill prepared for any sudden change of temperature.

The night was not cold, but the position of the youngsters was anything but comfortable. They were standing upon solid ice, which was all about them. Had they been on land, traversing the desolate wastes in their snowshoes, they could have cleared away a space for their blankets, or made a bed of pine branches, and, with their feet to the crackling fire, slept as soundly as if in their bed, thousands of miles away.

But nothing of the kind was at their disposal, and there was no possibility of leaving the iceberg before daylight.

"If we found the boat," said Brinton, "we wouldn't dare launch it."

"Of course not. What would be the use? We wouldn't know which way to row, and we would have to keep awake all night to save ourselves being swamped, and then, like enough, would be drowned after all."

"We might turn the boat to good account," observed Brinton "We could draw it up far enough to allow us to sleep in it."

But there was no likelihood of gaining such an advantage as that even.

"This isn't as secure a place as we want," said Brinton, some minutes later; "for, if we fall asleep here, we shall pitch over into the water. There is a spot just above us where we won't be likely to fall off."

"But we can't see our way to it."

"We can feel, and that's enough."

Fully alive to their danger, they gradually worked their way over and above the protuberances and cavities, until they had reached a point within a short distance of the top; where they stood upon a plateau wide and secure enough to guard against any such accident as the one named.

After a brief examination, they determined to remain where they were until morning.

The wind was blowing with such fury that they were glad to seek the shelter of the projecting masses, shuddering at the thought that possibly the dissolving sun and the wind would cause the iceberg to split into halves before they could leave it.

All at once the sky grew slightly clearer. The moon was shining, though this was the first time even the smallest portion of its rays had pierced the dense clouds.

By the faint illumination, the lads caught a glimpse of the water in their immediate vicinity. It was with foam and spray, and the waves had been hammered with a fury that raised them several feet in height. It would never have done to launch in such a sea as that.

But naught of boat or living man was to be seen, so far as the eye could extend over the waste of waters.

"Brinton, look there. Ain't that a queerly shaped piece of ice?"

As Fred Newton asked the question, he pointed just above them, where, less than a dozen yards distant, a smooth, rounded mass was observed, such as neither had noticed before, though the roving eye discovers every fanciful and imaginable resemblance above an iceberg.

"That's odd," said young Warren, viewing it by the aid of the dim moonlight. "What does it look like?"

"Don't you see? It's the very picture of a polar bear. Notice its head, the shoulders, the rounded back. It is a bear!"

This startling exclamation was caused by a perceptible movement of the object in which they felt such an interest.

Had there been any doubt remaining, it was removed by a distinct growl which escaped the animal.

And so the boys were not alone upon the iceberg. Their ride was shared by a colossal bear.

Young Newton, who stood the nearest, instantly raised his gun to his shoulder, but before he could take aim, his companion caught his arm.

"Don't fire till he's closser; it won't do to miss."

"More likely it won't do to hit" replied Fred, in a whisper, peering anxiously in the direction of the beast, "for it will take more ammunition than we have to kill him."

There was no certainty as yet that the formidable creature saw them, and the lads, conversing in whispers, stood motionless, using their eyes and ears for all they were worth.

As the animal had been mistaken for a portion of the ice, it would seem reasonable that he in turn had formed the same conjecture respecting the identy of the two boys, whom a strange fate had thrown upon his particular hunting-ground.

At any rate, the alarming motion of the bear was not in the nature of a charge upon the lads, who held themselves ready to fire, while praying that the necessity might be spared them. Still, it was more than likely his curiosity was aroused concerning them, and they could hardly hope that he would leave them undisturbed.

The growl was ominous, and proof that he knew something was amiss.

"Don't fire till the last minute," added Brinton; "for you know it's a hard thing to kill one of those animals—"

"My gracious! he's coming," broke in Fred, raising his gun again.

There could be no doubt that he intended to call upon the youngsters, who had entered his domain; but the configuration of the ice upon which he stood, as well as that which intervened between him and the boys, compelled some deliberation and awkwardness in his gait.

Emitting several more growls, his enormous body sagged forward several yards, as though he had chosen to leave that particular neighborhood; but, just then, it was noticed he was returning, while at the same time his elevation was less than before.

The fact was, he was descending the mountain as a loaded wagon comes down a steep slope—that is, by zigzagging from side to side over a series of inclined planes.

In this case, a couple of zigzags would bring him down upon the the lads.

"Here he is now!" added Fred, who saw just then that the formidable beast was moving, with his snout pointed straight at him.

It wouldn't do to wait any longer; and, aiming straight for the head, the lad fired. Without stopping to see the effect of his shot, he wheeled about, and retreated at a rapid and dangerous pace, forcing himself by his young friend, and calling on him to hurry away at once.

But Brinton was determined to get in a shot, and he quickly repeated the performance of Fred, firing at the same spot, and, in all probability, sending the ball in the same place.

There was no time to make a diagnosis of the bear's trouble, nor was there opportunity to hunt for a good path along which to flee.

Fred Newton was ahead in his scrambling retreat, and he shouted to Brinton, some rods in the rear:

"Follow me, Brinton, faster than that! the way is clear."

Warren cast his eye over his shoulder, and observed the ponderous creature swinging along dangerously close to his heels. So far as could be judged, the two bullets hadn't affected him in the least, unless they might have added to his rage, and thus actually increased the peril of the young fugitives.

Brinton couldn't well see how he could add any swiftness to his pace. He was running and scrambling along, with his left hand against the ice wall, while he held his gun in the other. It was necessary to look to his feet, even with his fried piloting him while he continually glanced over his shoulder to note their terrible pursuer's progress.

This furious retreat and pursuit could not continue long, for the bear was gaining, and the path which seemed to open so providentially before them along the side of the iceberg must terminate very soon.

"Where is he, Brint?" called out Fred; "is he close to you?"

"I should think he was—"

The speaker paused, with his reply half finished, for just then, to his dismay and consternation, he discovered that Fred Newton had vanished from sight!

CHAPTER IV.

A STRANGE SIGNAL.

Brinton Warren was so shocked that he forgot the bear was close behind him. Fred was gone—who could tell where? and the horrified lad, hurrying forward a few steps, called:

"Hello, Fred! Are you alive?"

"I rather think so," was the cheery response that came back; "slide down here after me, if you've got time."

Brief as was the halt, it was well-nigh fatal. The boy heard the deep breathing of the beast, and the rattling of his claws on the ice, as he lumbered along after him. One quick, furtive glance, and Brinton rolled, slid and tumbled a couple of rods, when he came to a halt, with such suddenness that the breath was knocked out of him.

"Now, load as quickly as you know how," admonished Fred, who was just ramming the charge home into his gun; "for he will be here very soon."

"Give a fellow a chance to pick up what's left of him, won't you?" growled his cousin, as he rose rather painfully to his feet; "why couldn't you have called out, so as to give me warning when I was to stop?"

But Fred was too much occupied with the bear to reply. He had his rifle charged a few seconds later, and then paused; with an excited whisper:

"Hurry up, Brint, you're terribly slow."

"So would you be if you were bruised as badly as I am."

Nevertheless the speaker made such good time that his weapon was ready even while he spoke.

Meanwhile, the situation was becoming more critical each moment.

The bear plainly saw both the boys, and he seemed on the point of dropping down upon them. He was growling and swinging his ponderous body slowly from one side to another, as his species are prone to do when undecided which of several paths to take to reach a foe.

His manner suggested that of the whining dog, which is hunting for an opening in a fence that will allow him to get through at his prey.

This indecision was not likely to last long, and, in the hope of disabling, if not killing him, Brinton and Fred raised their guns together.

"At his head again," whispered Fred, "we'll make a dent in it after awhile."

Taking as quick an aim as possible, they pulled the triggers almost simultaneously.

"We've killed him!" exclaimed Fred, excitedly.

"Killed him?" repeated Brinton, disgustedly; "we've just toned him up, so as to make him hungrier than before for us. See there!"

Manifestly, such a bulky animal could not follow the boys wherever they could go—though it seemed hard for the lads to discover such a spot when most wanted; but the savage efforts which the bear was making to call upon the boys looked so much like success that they did wisely in effecting an immediate change of base.

Although the wind was still blowing, the sky was clearer than before, and Fred and Brinton scrambled as quickly as possible from their perilous position, and managed to make considerable progress before stopping long enough to look around and see what had become of the bear.

He was nowhere to be seen. He had vanished as suddenly as if the iceberg had opened and dropped him into the chilly waters beneath.

"I shouldn't wonder, now, if those two last shots of ours finished him," said Fred, with some complacency.

"Nor I either; but it isn't certain, and I favor retreating further."

This was so eminently prudent that it was done, the lads finally coming to a pause again.

They listened.

The swash of the waves against the mighty walls of the ice, the noise of the waterfalls, the moaning of the gale, and the faint roar of the ocean, far away to the northward, were the only sounds which reached their ears.

Strain their eyes to the utmost, they could detect nothing of the frightful monster from which they escaped so narrowly.

Whatever the result of the shots fired, he was evidently outside of all calculations of the immediate future.

"Next time he will know enough to capture us right off," said Brinton, "without giving us a chance to scramble away. He was so close that I was sure he would nab me."

"I wonder that he didn't slide down that incline after us, when I fell over and went to the bottom, before I knew where I was."

"He'd cut a pretty figure sliding down hill, wouldn't he?" was the response of Brinton, who was still smarting from his hurts. "He would have to sit up straight, and, if he had struck the bottom with such a sudden bang as I did, he would have been crushed. We ought to have coaxed him to try the ride down hill."

"He's too accustomed to that sort of sport. However, Brinton, it looks as if we needn't worry any more about him, and we may as well hunt a spot where we can camp for the night."

"Suppose there are half a dozen more bears prowling round the iceberg, won't we be likely to run against them?"

"That isn't possible; from what I have heard, it was a very singular thing for this one to be afloat on this mass of ice."

"I wonder whether it didn't strike him as more singular to find us afloat on it? It's my opinion we are in a bad fix. When daylight comes, Captain Horton will be out of sight—"

"That can't be. This iceberg is too high for any one to get away from it in such a short time."

"But they will be out of sight, won't they, if they have sunk? Besides that, there may be a dozen other icebergs drifting about, and how are they going to tell them apart? If they only had their names painted on them in large letters, it would all be well enough, but icebergs don't have any earmarks, by which you can tell them apart. Then they may find the water too rough for them to ride."

"I don't see any danger of that at all. They are good seamen, and they will manage to rig a sail, and Captain Horton would be able to navigate his boat all the way to Moose Factory. I tell you what, Brinton, they're a good deal better off than we are, for they have provisions and the means of getting along. What's the matter?"

This abrupt question was caused by the actiou of Brinton, who, for some seconds, stood motionlese, gazing off toward a certain point of the compass. His wrapt, intense manner showed that something had arrested his attention.

"I can't make out what it is," was his answer, as stationarr as ever, withe his gaze still fixed upon the same point. "But once or twice I fancied I saw a point of light. There it is!"

"I saw it," added Fred, catching his excitement. "It isn't a star; it's a light which some one is carrying."

"But what makes it come to view and vanish again?" asked the perplexed Warren.

"It may be that the waves rise between us and that, as it sinks into the trough of the sea."

But the explanation was not satisfactory to the elder lad, who was convinced, however, that the light came from a boat. From the little knowledge they possessed of navigation, they thought that Captain Horton's lantern ought to have been suspended from his mast, instead of being carried in the hull.

Being without the means of striking a fire, the lads could only respond to the signal by shouting at the top of their voices; but, as before, the wind interfered, and they caught nothing of a reply.

"If they keep cruising around there all night, they will find us in the morn," said Brinton.

The behavior of the fiery point continued unaccountable to those who were so intently interested in it.

It was low down, and rose and sank so regularly on the swell of the sea that there could be no doubt it was borne on a float; but it was not clear to the lads why it should be eclipsed so regularly and totally.

Giving up this problem as practically unsolvable for the time, the great question was whether the boat was advancing, receding, or stationary.

This was scarcely less difficult to decide, though they were hopeful that the sailors had already discovered the proximity of the iceberg, in which event a closer approach might be counted upon.

It did not take long to learn that the latter was moving on its axis as before, as the star-like point continued slowly creeping along the horizon from right to left.

"Let's climb a little higher," said Fred, when he noticed the fact, fearful of losing sight of the star of hope. "It may come close enough for them to hear us call."

"If the wind gets in the right quarter, I'll make them hear me, if they row twice as far away."

They climbed carefully up the side of the iceberg, moving off to one side, guided by the obstructions in their path.

"Jump down there," said Brinton, pointing to a spot just in front. "It looks strong, and we can stand secure."

"All right," and Fred Newton made the leap.

Instead of striking ice or snow, he dropped upon something soft and yielding, and the next moment was paralyzed with fright, to discover that he had landed directly upon the head and shoulder of the same polar bear from which they believed they had escaped.

TO BE CONTINUED.

St. Nicholas for December will be a surprise to its young readers. Special effort has been made to glorify the Christmas season, and 35,000 extra copies (making an edition of 105,000) are being published to meet the anticipated orders from Santa Claus. The new decoration for the cover will be wintry and spirited. Among the greatly varied and profusely illustrated contents will be an operetta for young people called "The Land of Nod," in which six little sleepy-heads visit the marvelous place and see many wonders. The libretto is musical and vivacious verse, and the music is by Mr. Anthony Reiff and Mr. W. F. Sherwin. Mr. Frank R. Stockton will contribute one of his droll and quaint fairy stories, and Mr. Washington Gladden describes "A Christmas Dinner with the Man in the Moon." A new feature of St. Nicholas will be begun. It is a "Treasure-box of Literature," whose value and purposes are indicated by the first contents, which will be reprints of Nathaniel Hawthorne's fantasy "David Swan," and Thackeray's poem, "King Canute." Both are to be illustrated.

Among the serials begun in the December (Christmas) nnmber of St. Nicholas will be a remarkable series of papers entitled "In Nature's Wonderland; or, Adventures in the American Tropics." These papers, written by Dr. Felix L. Oswald, who experienced the adventures they describe, rival in incident and interest the narratives of Captain Mayne Reid, for they detail the perils and triumphs of a hunter engaged in catching birds and wild animals for a menagerie.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY FOR NOVEMBER.—It contains a larger number of pages than any previous issue of that incomparable magazine,—168 pages of text and two pages of frontispiece,—170 in all, besides thirty-four pages of advertisements, or a total of 204. The December SCRIBNER will have 160 pages of text, and fifty of advertisements, or a total of 210 pages. Inasmuch as the advertising department is largely devoted to books of recent issue, it is a feature of decided interest and value to the readers of this valuable magazine.

A novel feature in the December (Christmas) number of St. Nicholas will be a story of child-life in Athens, during the reign of Pericles, when the city was at the height of its power; and the Editor promises for the story seven beautiful illustrations by Alfred Brennan. Among the subjects represented in these pictures will be a foot-race of Spartan girls, the colossal statue of Pallas with Victory, and a portico showing the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian columns.

Col. L. E. Crandall, an eloquent speaker, fine orator, and a man of experience in the temperance field, will address our people on this important subject next Sunday afternoon at Light Guard Hall, at three o'clock. No effort will be spared on the part of the committee to make the meeting a success. Everybody should come and not miss a treat.

Drunkards, read this! Drunkenness expels reason, distempers the soul, diminishes strength, inflames the blood; causes internal, external, eternal, incurable wounds; is a witch to the senses, a demon to the soul, a thief to the purse, a guide to beggary, lethergy, and villiany; it is the wife's woe and the children's sorrow; it makes a man wallow worse than a beast, and act like a fool. A Queer Notion.

Many people think it cheaper to buy 25 cent sizes of a proprietary medicine. But they make a mistake. For instance, Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry contains about eight times the quantity of ordinary 25 cent balsams. Becides it takes a less quantity of Wistar's Balsam to cure a cold. A single dose is often sufficient. For deep seated Colds and comsumption it has proven itself to be the best and quickest cure ever discovered. 845 1 yr.

For Thirty Years.

For thirty years Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry has been kept for sale by druggists generally, and in all that time there has not been a single complaint made, but on the contrary the druggists and the people acknowledge it to be the best remedy for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Comsumption; Bronchits, Asthma, and all lung Diseases 845 1 yr.
